The Committee of Seventy is a nonpartisan civic leadership organization that advances representative, ethical and effective government in Philadelphia and Pennsylvania through citizen engagement and public policy advocacy.

Form 990, Part III, Line 2

Draw the Lines PA is a nonpartisan education and engagement initiative created by Seventy around the issue of redistricting. DTL takes the same type of data and technology that the political pros use to gerrymander districts, and gives it to Pennsylvania's students and voters so they can draw their own election maps. Mappers use a GIS mapping platform called DistrictBuilder, and the DTL website (drawthelinespa.org) contains a host of resources to support their effort. Pennsylvanians can then submit their maps to our spring competition, where they have a chance to win a prize from a $35,000 statewide purse. Their maps are judged by a volunteer steering committee made of a diverse range of respected civic, business, and political leaders from across the state, representing all ranges of ideology. After drawing their map, Pennsylvanians can share it with their elected representatives to urge reform. Ultimately, Draw the Lines is a demonstration project that the voters of PA are ready, willing, and able to do this core work of democracy.

Since Draw the Lines officially launched in February 2018, it has engaged over 1,500 people in drawing election maps around Pennsylvania on a custom-designed platform called DistrictBuilder, including 318 completed and submitted maps to our inaugural competition last fall. DTL awarded over $32,000 in prizes to statewide and regional honorees for outstanding achievements and engagement in congressional mapping.

In the fall alone, DTL connected with over 2,000 Pennsylvanians at 70+ events statewide. DTL generated over 50 media stories in 2018, including spotlights in the Philadelphia Inquirer, WHYY, WITF, and WESA public media, and numerous other small outlets across the commonwealth. DTL's steering committee of 60+ respected civic and community leaders is led by respected officials like former Governor Mark Schweiker, former State Senator Mike Brubaker, current Urban Affairs Coalition Executive Director Sharmain Matlock-Turner, former Superior Court Judge Maureen Lally-Green, former US Attorney Fred Thieman, and director of the PA Council of Churches Sandy Strauss.

Election Program & Civic Education and Engagement

The Committee of Seventy greatly increased our outreach and education efforts around the May primary and November general elections. From candidate interviews and forums, to a new app that put all of our Election Day resources at your fingertips, we experienced record-breaking levels of engagement with Philadelphians this year. At a time when all news is seemingly national, and very little to no coverage is given to state and local politics, Seventy has dedicated programming and resources to making the case for Why Harrisburg Matters, even hosting an event by that title. Recent retirements have caused the Philadelphia delegation to lose over 80 years of seniority in the legislature. The competitive races for these open seats provided us an opportunity to explain the importance of Harrisburg in solving critical issues in Philadelphia, and to introduce a wide audience to the candidates and their positions. Through a series of special editions of Seventy's podcast, 20 by Seventy, candidates spoke with CEO David Thornburgh to make their case to voters. Seventy also partnered with Al Día News to host a Candidate Forum in the 197th district in the largely Hispanic section of North Philadelphia.

Seventy's online voter engagement expanded and became more refined in 2018. The organization's now well-known Voter Guide was expanded to include a three question survey given to every candidate and it attracted more visitors: 71,000 leading up to the November election - more than in any prior year. Seventy also continued use of its Digital Ballot Tool, an innovative resource that was complemented with the development of the WeVote app to bring the tool to user's phones. Seventy promoted these items heavily via email (18,000+ users), Facebook (6,700+ followers) and Twitter (8,450+ followers), including paid boosts targeting city residents aged 18 to 65+.
